

Brought to you by: HDTV Magazine and AFFINITY MARKETING

Dear Sponsor and/or Exhibitor,

We wish to extend a cordial invitation to you and your Company to participate in a continuing series of Consumer HDTV Expo's located in carefully selected, designated market areas and venues around the United States. These events will educate and inform consumers all about HDTV.

HDTV Magazine and Affinity Marketing are planning an Inaugural Tour of three Expo's that will begin in February 2007. After these first three, HDTV Expo's will continue throughout 2007, 2008 and 2009 in different cities around the U.S. Our launch goal is 12 to 18 HDTV Expo's each year.

These 3-day Weekend Events (Thursday is set-up day) will give Sponsors and Exhibitors the opportunity to touch and educate both new prospects and existing customers. By participating you can also build brand and product awareness, and loyalty...Please Read On!

A GREAT OPPORTUNITY TO ENGAGE CONSUMERS, EXCITE THEM AND DRIVE SALES

It's an established fact that there is tremendous consumer confusion over HDTV. Many people simply don't understand the many choices available in hardware (HDTV Sets), their HDTV content and source options, or how to enhance HDTV performance in their home with proper cable connections. Over 7 million consumers who currently own HDTV sets are not receiving an HDTV signal on those TVs. To everyone, this should be a staggering statistic.

There's no doubt that digital products continue to capture the imagination of consumers and drive consumer electronic industry sales to new heights. But even though this success is celebrated, manufacturers and retailers face an unprecedented array of challenges in consumer education. The Consumer Electronics Association (CEA) executive board has directed CEA to urge the industry to support an unprecedented joint effort to educate consumers about HDTV. The new law, which was signed by President Bush in February 2006, will end analog broadcasting on February 17, 2009. Although this hard cut-off date itself is certain to generate HDTV sales, it will also prompt consumer confusion and concern. What can help "smooth the path" as we approach this digital transition date?

THE HDTV EXPO FILLS THE GAP

Sponsorship and speaking opportunities and/or Exhibit Space are only being offered to a few select companies. This is not a "come-one, come-all" exhibitor event. Your Company has been selected because you have either shown a strong commitment to innovation and growth within the Consumer Electronics Industry; you operate as an HDTV channel provider; or, you are a local major Network Affiliate. As an Exhibitor, you will have the opportunity to give accurate, expert information to prospective customers in intimate, non-threatening surroundings. "Exhibitors" can showcase their products and/or services. As a "Sponsor", you have the opportunity to speak to consumers, who are thirsty for accurate information at Education Seminars. Consumers will walk away from this FREE "OPEN-TO-THE-PUBLIC" Event armed with the knowledge necessary to make intelligent buying decisions. At the same time, YOU have a unique opportunity to capture their hearts and minds, differentiate your brand, explain your features and benefits and, most important, stimulate retail sales throughout 2007 and beyond.

WILL CONSUMERS ATTEND? DOES YOUR PRESENCE MAKE A BIG DIFFERENCE TO THEM?

Isn't this really the core issue and question? ...Again, Please Read On!

ATTENDANCE:

Similar events held by other event organizers in 2005 and 2006 in both New York City and Los Angeles have reported consumer attendance at 44,000 and 12,000 respectively. Naturally, it's the size of each selected market, the extent of the PR and advertising launched prior to the event, along with your support of THE HDTV EXPO (in each respective DMA) that will directly relate to size of the attendance at each specific Event. Although it's hard to project attendance beforehand, we do have "researched attendance estimates" and have clear plans to properly promote THE HDTV EXPO. We do have the experience and proper contacts to make each Event a huge success for all participants.

Up to now, other show promoters seem to have only chosen markets like NYC, LA & Chicago because of their sheer size. We believe that successful Events can be scaled to the size of a carefully selected market. Bottom line, it's whether or not YOU feel you've received an adequate return on your investment...no matter where or when our Event is located.

CONSUMERS DO CARE IF YOU'RE THERE:

Research findings show that the opportunity for consumers to meet face-to-face with companies at this type of Event before they make their buying decisions is important to them.

Nearly 75% of those surveyed reported a more favorable perception of companies that they are able to meet with face-to-face.

Nearly 75% of those surveyed reported that they are more likely to purchase products or services from a company that has invested the time and money to meet with them face-to-face.

8 out of 10 consumers said that they would come back to Events like this.

YOU CAN HELP MAKE THE HDTV EXPO MEANINGFUL TO YOUR CUSTOMERS

These Events are all about working together to enhance consumer education about HDTV. Your market and your customers need you to touch them directly. Magazines and the Internet are two viable sources of information, but there's no substitute for direct contact with customers. Excellent product demonstrations and exhibits along with expert, unbiased educational seminars that teach the differences in Plasma, DLP, and LCD TVs, HDMI Cables, and the available HDTV Content and HDTV Sources are simply the BEST way to engage the general public and win their confidence. Investing in better educating your customer is simply a good tactical business decision. February 17, 2009 (the analog signal cutoff date) is getting closer every day. The work we do together today will pay huge dividends both now and in the future.
